OPINION AND ORDER

12

13 This case concerns the recovery of contribution and response
14 costs incurred and to be incurred by Plaintiff, the Puerto Rico Ports
15 Authority ("PRPA"), in cleaning up its property located in Arecibo, 16 Puerto Rico ("the site"), pursuant to the Comprehensive Environmental 17 Response, Compensation and Liability Act ("CERCLA").

18

19 On March 31, 1999, we issued an Opinion and Order denying 20 Defendants, PC International, Inc. ("PCI Int'l"); Pollution Control
21 Industries ("PCI"); and Carreras Trucking, Inc. ("Carreras
22 Trucking"), and Third-Party Defendant National Union Fire Insurance 23 Company's ("National Union") motions for summary judgment on the 24 issues of liability under section 107(a) of CERCLA, 42 U.S.C.
25 § 9607(a); the affirmative defense of section 107(b) of CERCLA, 42

1 U.S.C. § 9607(b); Plaintiff's compliance with the national 2 contingency plan mandated under section 107(a)(4) of CERCLA, 42
 3 U.S.C. § 967(a)(4); and the pollution exclusion policy.¹

4 That Opinion and Order has spawned a plethora of responsive
 5 motions. Defendant Carreras Trucking moves to amend our Opinion and 6 Order alleging that we are "gravely mistaken" about the issue of 7 Plaintiff's response costs being "necessary." Docket Document
 8 No. 118. Additionally, Defendants PC Int'l and PCI move for 9 reconsideration of our Opinion and Order concerning the date the 10 contamination occurred and the issue of whether a third party
 11 directly caused the contamination. Docket Document No. 119.
 12 Finally, Third-Party Defendant National Union moves for 13 reconsideration of our Opinion and Order alleging that the insurance 14 policy covers the contamination at the site and that there was no
 15 contamination during National Union's policy period, i.e., the date
 16 the contamination occurred. Docket Document Nos. 120 and 121.

20 The Necessity of Plaintiff's Response Costs

21 Defendant Carreras Trucking alleges that we are "gravely 22 mistaken" about whether the response costs incurred by Plaintiff were 23 "necessary." Defendants PC Int'l and PCI also contend that we

1 incorrectly determined that PRPA's response costs were necessary.
2 However, Defendants' bold assertions are not supported by one case or 3 statutory cite. Had Defendants' attorneys spent any time at all 4 researching the issue, we believe they would not have filed these 5 motions.

6 First of all, CERCLA does not define what constitutes a
7 "necessary" response cost. The paltry guidance Congress has provided 8 is limited to an ambiguous definition of response which encompasses 9 the terms remove, removal, remedy, and remedial action. Therefore, 10 courts have liberally interpreted what constitutes a necessary
11 response cost. See, e.g., NL Industries, Inc. v. Kaplan, 792 F.2d 896 12 (9th Cir. 1986) (denying motion to dismiss because allegations that 13 state and local agencies mandated the response costs sufficiently 14 supported the claim that the costs were necessary under 15 § 107(a)(2)(B) of CERCLA); International Clinical Laboratories, Inc.
16 v. Stevens, 710 F.Supp. 466 (E.D.N.Y. 1989) (denying defendant's 17 summary judgment motion that some of the response costs were 18 duplicative because a hearing was necessary to determine the issue);
19 Allied Corp. v. Acme Solvents Reclaiming, Inc., 691 F.Supp. 1100
20 (N.D.Ill. 1988) (denying motion to dismiss because response costs 21 could be "necessary" even when they were not incurred pursuant to the 22 implementation of a response action approved by the United States
23 Environmental Protection Agency).

1 Another helpful case is Cadillac Fairview/California, Inc. v Dow
2 Chemical Co., 840 F.2d 691 (9th Cir. 1988). In that case, the court
3 found that significant state or local government action need not 4 precede responsive actions for the actions to be considered
5 "necessary" under CERCLA. Id. The court based its decision upon the 6 absence of statutorily-mandated approval or certification.
7 Therefore, the logical inference is that parties not seeking 8 reimbursement from the Superfund do not need prior governmental 9 approval in order for their response costs to be necessary. Id.

11 Furthermore, we are at the preliminary stages of the 12 proceedings. We are not in a position, without further evidence
13 which will be presented at trial, to determine which response costs
14 were necessary. See Id. (concluding that the issue of whether a 15 response action is necessary is a factual inquiry to be determined in 16 the damages stage of a lawsuit); Stevens, 710 F.Supp. at 466. Our 17 Opinion and Order states, "[t]here is no dispute over whether 18 Plaintiff PRPA's response costs are 'necessary.'" Docket Document 19 No. 116, p. 25. This is not a conclusion that the costs were 20 necessary, it is simply a reflection of the motions that were before 21 us at that time.

23 Accordingly, we deny Defendant Carreras Trucking's motion to 24 amend our Opinion and Order and Defendants PC Int'l and PCI's motion 25 for reconsideration.

Date the Contamination Occurred

3 Defendants, PC Int'l and PCI, move for reconsideration of our 4 Opinion and Order concerning the date the contamination occurred.
5 Without offering any new evidence, Defendants contend that we should 6 re-evaluate and ponder upon the same materials we had before us in 7 denying the motion for summary judgment. In fact, Defendants admit 8 in their motion that "[t]here is no conclusive evidence to indicate 9 the date when the caustic soda contamination occurred . . ." Docket
10 Document No. 119, p. 4. Nonetheless, Defendants urge reconsideration
11 of our original determination. After re-examining the issue, we deny 12 Defendants' motion for reconsideration. No evidence before us
13 indicates when the contamination occurred. Lacking this essential 14 piece of information, we are unable to determine which parties are 15 responsible persons within the meaning of CERCLA. 42 U.S.C.
16 § 9607(a).
17

18
19 Third-Party Defendant National Union also moves for 20 reconsideration asserting that its policy could not possibly have 21 covered the date upon which the contamination occurred in this case.
22 Based upon the affidavit of Roberto Ramírez, an expert witness for 23 Defendant Carreras Trucking, National Union contends that the spill
24 could not have occurred during the period from August 1983 to August 25 1984. Taking a look at the evidence and the type of contamination at 26

1 Civil No. 96-1969 (JAF)

-6-

1 issue, we find that Defendant National Union's policy could not have 2 covered the caustic soda spill in this case. Even though we cannot 3 conclusively determine the date the contamination occurred, we find 4 that ten years is too long a period of time for caustic soda to 5 remain active and environmentally damaging. We grant National 6 Union's motion.

7 III.

8 Cause of the Contamination

9
10 Defendants PC Int'l and PCI move for reconsideration of our 11 Opinion and Order alleging that a third party was the direct cause of 12 the contamination. However, Defendants offer no new or different 13 support for their contentions. Rather, they point to a number of 14 facts which we considered in our first denial of their motion. We 15 remain unpersuaded. We are unable to conclusively determine the 16 cause of the contamination. We find a genuine issue of material fact 17 remains as to that issue.

18
19 IV.

20 Conclusion

21 In accordance with the foregoing, we DENY Defendant Carreras
22 Trucking's motion to amend; DENY Defendants PC Int'l and PCI's motion
23 for reconsideration, and GRANT Third-Party Defendant National Union's 24 motion for reconsideration. As a result, National Union is no longer
